ABOUT THE WORK

Description: Terra Luna's Tapestry draws inspiration from the timeworn beauty of aged textiles and the layers of history held within them. Soft dusty pinks, warm tans, and earthy browns unfold across a richly textured surface, while subtle traces of gold emerge like threads catching the light. The work evokes something ancient and enduring—a fragment of a forgotten landscape or tapestry shaped by time.

Inspiration: The inspiration for Terra Luna's Tapestry began with an unexpected discovery inside a sewing machine I inherited from my grandmother. Tucked within it was a beautiful piece of fabric, reminiscent of an old tapestry, with the words "Terra Luna's" stapled to it. I never learned who Terra Luna was or what the fabric had once been used for, but I imagined how beautiful it must have been when it was new. Time had left it worn and weathered, yet its beauty had not disappeared. Instead, its age seemed to give it a character and depth of its own. I was drawn to its muted pinks, warm tans, and earthy browns, which became the palette for my artwork. Through this piece, I wanted to honor the quiet beauty of something that has endured, carrying traces of an unknown story while leaving room for the imagination.
